Floyce Gilbreath Boles - Heard tales of the Civil War and days of early settling at the foot of her grandmother, Polly Ann Gilbreath, but as a child these were merely fairy tales she liked to hear. After years of teaching and nursing, she returned to Wood County, Texas to a career of Public Health Nursing. At this time, she had many contacts with older settlers and with the Gilbreath Family; thus, feeling it her destiny to complete this Family Tree.

Eleyse Waldon

Eleyse Waldon - The Gilbreath Family was her pride and joy. Every year she would begin months ahead planning and preparing for the reunion. Her vigor and enthusiasm never dwindled. She was secretary of the Gilbreath Family Reunion in Quitman, Texas 32 years out of 34 years until her death.

The second number stands for the generation.

B. - This is the birth date, or born.

D. - This is the date of death, or died.

M. - This stands for "marriage". Following this is the marriage date.

2.2 - If the offspring has children or is married his family is continued a second time. If not, the offspring is not mentioned other than under his parent.

Acknowledgement

First and foremost, let us designate Turman Gilbreath, who with unyielding determination established the Gilbreath Family Reunion. The first meeting was held in the home of his children, and as the crowd grew larger, to the Jim Hogg Park, Arnold Holly Hall, and other public places in Quitman, Texas. Let us name him as the person who inspired others and dedicated himself to bringing about unity to his family name. It was he who insisted upon the recording of the geneology of of his family name, the history and prestige of his forefathers, and also that of his nieces, nephews and cousins. The gathering together of his people became an obsession with him in his later years.

In fact, family living is the very heart of the American way of life. One's own family history becomes very alluring when one learns them by name, as grandparents, aunts, uncles and cousins. Though it is quite a problem to unwind all the Andy's, Amos', Hough's, John's, James', and Joel's, many long hours of searching, studying, writing of letters, countless visits, along with the help and encouragement of those interested in its success eventually bring out the hidden mystery of who belongs where, if one does not despair and give up.

A number of family members have helped to make this book a success, possibly by giving assistance in furnishing names and birthdates of their own individual families, also by writing other family members to secure their names and birth dates.

Let us first of all pay tribute to a dear aunt now deceased, Mrs. Nettie Gilbreath, who worked untiringly until her death securing information from various parties of her own family and others until all the information was secured.

Other names I would like to mention are Mrs. Myrtie Youngblood, Mrs. Louie Fay Grounder, Mrs. Eunic Oxford, Mr. Leonard Carrol Ingram, Mr. Jon U. Gilbreath, Mrs. Sam Gilbreath, Mrs. Ivie Cade, Mrs. Zelda Smith, Mrs. Carrie Rushing, Mrs. Eula Goldsmith, Mr. E.C. Gilbreath (of Huntington, Indiana), and a host of others I have not mentioned here.

I would also like to mention the untiring interest of Eleyse Waldon and her cooperation. As secretary of the Family Reunion for 32 years out of 33, she has faithfully furnished addresses and other information needed in compiling all this information.

Without the help of Billy Gilbreath, President of the Gilbreath Family Reunion, Quitman, Texas, who pushed for early publication, and Analon Gilbreath, his wife, who helped with format, this book may never have reached print.

Last of all, Karen McElroy, who worked hard and long in typing, organizing and editing.

My thanks to all,

Floyce Boles

Early Family History and Geneology

A Gaelic saying of uncertain date ranks Gilbraith as one of the greatest surnames according to Black in the "SURNAMEs OF SCOTLAND", in which he quotes the following:

"Breatunnach o'n Talloy Dheirg Uaisle 'sclichd Albanndoshioinne."
(Gilbraith from the red tower)
Noblest of Abannic race, thy pedigree."

The name Gilbreath which, according to one source, may have as many as fifteen spellings, is listed in the "LANCASTER COUNTY DEEDS" under Gailbrath, Galbraith, Galbreth and Gilbraith.

One geneologist told some of the family that the name originally came from Wales and from there spread to Normandy, Scotland, England and Ireland. In the book, "THE SURNAMEs OF IRELAND" by Edward MacLysaght, the author gives this history of the name:

"Gilbraith--well known Scottish name which came to Ireland at the time of province. The Scots Gaelic form is Mac anBreathnaigh (Breathnach, Welshman)."

The plantation of Ulster mentioned was a great migration of early Presbyterians from Scotland during the reign of James, II of England in 1609. Later information shows that the Gilbraiths were, indeed, actively involved in church affairs in Pennsylvania.

Another source takes a slightly different slant on the meaning of the name:

"The Galbraith is derived from the Gaelic words for 'Foreigner Briton'.

When the Galbraith chiefs first appear on record, in the twelfth century, they were already noble Britons who had intermarried with the greatest family among the local Gaels and held lands in the Lennox

(the earldom watered by the Leven) north of Dunbarton, 'the Fortress of the Britons', former capital of the kingdom of Strathclyde.

This had been established as a kingdom of the Ancient Britons after the withdrawal of the Roman legions from Britain in the fifth century, and was only finally united with Scotland in 1124. The early Scottish chiefs were heads of branches of dynastic houses; so the Galbraith chiefs may well have been remote cadets of the old royal house of Strathclyde.

Certainly, their first recorded Chief, Gilchrist Bretnach or 'the Briton', living in 1193, was married to a daughter of Alwyn Og mac Mureadhach. Earl of Lennox (and descendant of the Ancient Mormaers of the district) at a time when earls' daughters were not accustomed to marry below the rank of thane or baron.

The Galbraiths had a stronghold on the island of Inchgalbraith in Loch Lomond, and were known as Clann-a-Bhreatannich or 'Children of the Britons'. Their arms of three bears' heads may perhaps allude to the Ancient British heroic name Arthur, which was used in their family and means a bear.

Sir William Galbraith of Buthernock, the 4th Chief, married a sister of the 'Black Cummin', head of the greatest family in Scotland and later a competitor for the crown. All the same, Sir Williams sided against the Cummins, and took part in the daring plot whereby the boy-kind Alexander, III was 'rescued' from their control. This Galbraith chief then became so powerful as to become himself one of the Co-Regents of Scotland in 1255. His son, the next Chief of the Galbraiths, married a sister of the famous 'Good Sir James of Douglas' who fell carrying the dead Bruce's heart on Crusade against the Saracens in Spain.

By 1320, a branch of the Galbraiths held Culcreuch in Strathendrick, and towards the end of that century the Galbraiths of Culcreuch inherited the chiefship of the clan. Thomas Galbraith of Culcreuch, 12th 'chieffe of the Galbraiths' was captured by King James, IV in 1489 and hanged.

Throughout the sixteenth century, the Galbraiths were involved in many a wild and lawless action, except during such periods as when the 16th Chief was appointed Sheriff-Depute of Dunbartonshire in 1578 to administer the Lennox on behalf of its absent statesman-duke.

In 1622, Robert Galbraith of Culcreuch, 17th Chief, in dept to his brother-in-law (whom he waylaid and fired upon, but in vain), was denounced as a rebel and forced to give up Culcreuch Castle to him. The Chief then emigrated to Ireland.

From a younger brother of the 13th Chief (who died in about 1512), there descended the Galbraiths in Balgair, which adjoins Culcreuch. This branch in modern times has produced the Honble. 'Tam Galbraith, M.P., Civil Lord of the Admiralty and Under Secretary of State for Scotland in Harold Macmillan's administration, and his father the Right Honble, Thomas Galbraith, P.C. Minister of State in the Scottish office, who in 1955 was appropriately created 1st Lord Strathclyde.

"The first of the name of whom we have any mention is John Galbraith, who was the father of the following. He probably died before the emigration of his sons from Ireland to America:" (1)

According to early tradition, three Gilbreath brothers came over from northern Ireland. Floyce Gilbreath Boles states that her father told her this story and that it has been oral history for years. One contact in Miami, Florida, a realtor named Galbreath, told her that his family had the same story handed down. He also added that their tradition said that the three brothers were slightly hard headed and flighty of temperment. When they disagreed and came to a parting of the ways, each took a different spelling of the name. Thus, we find Gilbreaths, Galbraiths, and Gailbreaths, all of whom may be tied into one family tree.

The whole of the story is this:

Three brothers came from Ireland to America. Their names were Andrew, James and John. James Gilbreath was born in 1666 in North Ireland. From there he emigrated about 1718 settling in Conestoga, Donegal, then in Chester County, Province of Pennsylvania. His wife was Rebecca Chambers, daughter of Arthur Chambers. James died August 23, 1754 and was buried in the graveyard at Derry.

Andrew Galbraith was born in 1692. He emigrated with his brothers in 1718 and settled along the run which has its source at Donegal township, now Lancaster, Pennsylvania. He was one of the justices to the Court of Common Pleas for six years and was elected to the General Assembly. He took patent for twelve and one-half acres of land in 1737 and was one of the first ruling elders of the old Donegal Church. He was appointed Justice of the Peace in 1730 and continued to 1747.

John Galbraith was born about 1670 in Northern Ireland. Coming to America with his brothers in 1718, he settled along Donegal Meeting House Run about one and one-fourth miles below his brother, Andrew. He was a miller by trade and built a grist mill and sawmill at a run along the great road which likely branched at Paxtang and Conestoga some miles east of Mount Joy. He was elected sheriff of the County of Lancaster in 1731. He was also a member of the first jury drawn in the county. He married Janet, fathered one child known to us, Andrew. He later moved to Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania and was last heard of there. He died in 1753.

Due to lack of mail or any other communications, the three older brothers never heard of Alexander's birth, the fourth brother. They never heard of his coming to America, much less settling in Pennsylvania or moving on to Virginia.

4.2 Alexander Galbraith.

Because of the widespread acceptance of the above story among divergent groups of the Gilbreath clan over the country, most of the family feel that there is, indeed, an authentic connection. Although there is a wealth of information about the Galbraiths in various records of early Pennsylvania, there is difficulty in finding this connection and in finding the place where our particular name change took place.

Interestingly enough, our own family tradition is born out with startling similarity in the following account which comes directly from Charles Knowles Bolton's book, "SCOTCH-IRISH PIONEERS", published by Geneological Publishing Co., 1967.

SCOTCH-IRISH PIONEERS

Philadelphia seems to have had a considerable emigration from Dublin, Belfast and Glasgow from the time of the arrival of the first Quakers in 1682. What are we to think of over seventy passengers from Waterford, Ireland, who arrived in the ship Cezar, Matthew, Cowman, commander, in July, 1716, (1) or of fifty passengers from Cork in March, 1718.

Again, of what character were the one hundred and fifty passengers which the Elizabeth and Margaret, after a voyage of twelve weeks from Dublin, left at Philadelphia in August, 1718? Were these people Presbyterian Scotch-Irish? A few may, no doubt, have claimed their faith and their blood, but I cannot but believe that up to the year 1719 most of the passengers were English and Celtic servants and mechanics with a number of prosperous Scotch and English Quakers. Very few Ulster weavers and farmers came to the South until word reached Ireland late in 1718 that Boyd, the Bann Valley envoy, had found serious difficulty in obtaining land in New England for settlement. In 1719 hundreds of Scotch-Irish emigrants turned to lands in Chester County and to the fields south of Pennsylvania line for their homes. (2)

The Scotch Irish migration of Presbyterians to Chester County began in 1719, and, thus, came long after the English-Irish migration of Quakers which had begun in 1682. These Presbyterians became of sufficient influence in Chester County in 1722 to obtain the name Donegal for their township. Chief among them at this time were:

James Galbraith, Sr., (2.2) and his sons,
Andrew, James and John;
Robert Wilkins and his sons, Thomas,
William, Peter and John;
Gordon Howard and his sons, Thomas and Joseph;
George Stuart and his son, John;
Peter Allen;
James Roddy;
James and Alexander Hutchinson;
John and Robert Spear;
Hugh, Henry and Moses White;
Robert McFarland and his sons, Robert and James;
James Paterson;
Richard Allison.

In due time, they gave their prosperity to maintain a well-built "ordinary", or tavern, for which the same thrifty John obtained a license in 1726. Here Rebecca, his daughter, was born, to become, at the age of eighteen, the wife of Colonel Ephraim Blaine, whose untiring efforts as Commissary of Provisions kept body and soul together through the terrible winter at Valley Forge. Thus, the Scotch-Irish of Donegal were to have their influence upon the greater events of the world.

The fine old church at Donegal became a center of religious influence. Its plain walls, high windows, and great gambrel roof symbolizes the plain manners and large hearts of its worshippers. Beneath the even turf within the graveyard wall, these pioneers now lie, protected from the summer's heat by spruce and cedar. The heirs of their blood and brain are building the great West, while strange hands trim the sod, and children with unfamiliar names play among the ancient head stones. (3) After the Galbraiths and their friends had moved westward or had become less dominant in their influence, other men of the same race came into prominence, the Semples, Andersons, Lowreys, Pedans, Porters, and Whitehills.

Donegal was only one of four townships along the east bank of the Susquehanna, all of them Scotch-Irish settlements, which extended south and north of the present city of Harrisburg. Perhaps the most interesting of these is Derry, since its ancient meeting house brings to the present generation a flavor of those pioneer times. Built on the "Barrens of Derry" as early as 1729, its walls were of hewn oak logs, two feet thick covered by rough hemlock boards, and sheathed within with yellow pine and cherry. The nails and fastenings were primitive examples of hammer and anvil; the thirty-eight panes of glass

(Meeting House at Derry, Pennsylvania)

over the pulpit were set in pewter, and the communion service was of the same metal mugs and platters sent over from London by sympathizing dissenters in 1733. The pulpit was small and crescent shaped, with narrow steps leading up from the east side. Along the wall were stout pegs on which to sling the muskets of the male worshippers. Close by the meeting house was the session-house with the pastor's study, and a few rods away within a neat wall about God's acre slept the dead. (4)

Derry, early known as Spring Creek received its first settlers about 1720. As the Scotch-Irish began to increase in numbers, a Presbyterian minister was needed, and, in 1726, the Rev. James Anderson of Donegal gave one-fifth of his time to Derry, and another fifth to Paxtang.

One of the founders of the church was James Galbraith whose father, James, had crossed the ocean, some say, as early as 1718. The younger James had fallen in love with Elizabeth Bertram, the daughter of a clergyman from Bangor, County Down, who came to the church at Derry. Elizabeth's mother, Elizabeth Gillespie, tradition claimed, had a fine estate in Edinburgh. James settled on Swatara Creek, next to the farm of three hundred fifty acres which the Derry people had deeded to their minister upon his arrival. Here a prosperous farm and grist-mill brought food and clothing for James's growing family and for aged father, who came to dwell under his roof.

In the early days of the settling of America when Pennsylvania was the western frontier, much of it was unknown wilderness. In a call to a minister for Donegal Church, a statement is made to the effect that they are in a vast wilderness and go in peril of their sole. It is no wonder then that it was more important for a man to be a good marksman and to know his woodcraft, than it was to know the exact spelling of his name. In a time when spelling was at times indifferent or people spelled phonetically, members of the same family often had different spellings of their surnames. In "ABSTRACTS FROM FRANKLIN'S PENNSYLVANIA GAZETTE", 1728-1748, Andrew Galbreth is mentioned as being elected representative for Lancaster County and John Galbreth for Sheriff in October, 1731. The same pair is elected for the same positions in 1732. After that John apparently gives up his position as sheriff, but Andrew continues for a number of years as representative. The interesting thing is that in the year 1738 the spelling reverts back to the common spelling of the family in that area, which was Galbraith.

There is some geneological information on the families of James and John Gilbreath, brothers to the Andrew who settled in Wood County. A book has been published about Erath County, containing some information which will add to your knowledge of the Gilbreath family in Texas. Also, in the back of the book are various other records (deeds, marriages, letters, etc.) and odds and ends of information, which may be of general interest and perhaps provide a clue for further research.

Included in these records, there is a letter which provides information. The letter was written by Jeff Ross of Savannah, Tennessee to the John Gilbreath family of Maury County, Tennessee in 1821. He states that Andrew Gilbreath married Nancy Hicklin. The Hicklins were of Scotch-Irish descent, who settled in Susquehanna County, Pennsylvania between 1700 and 1770. They later moved to South Carolina, where Nancy was raised on the PeeDee River. At the age of 16, she ran away and married Andrew Gilbreath, Andrew Gilbreath then moved to Virginia, where all his children were born. Andrew and two of his brothers were in the Revolutionary War together, and Andrew died enroute home from the war. His wife returned from Virginia to South Carolina and joined her husband's brothers, who were moving to Kentucky. She had a daughter, Elizabeth, age five, and a son, John, age three, and perhaps other children. Elizabeth afterwards married Nathan Coffee.

Descendants of John Gilbreath also stated that John Gilbreath's wife, Mary Coffee, was a sister to Nathan Coffee, whose father was Chesley Coffee. The Coffee seem to appear about the same time in Adair, Kentucky; then both families moved on to Maury County, Tennessee. Euspence Coffee was a second wife to Nathan Coffee.

The Adair County, Kentucky marriage records list a marriage of Nathan Coffee to Elizabeth Kilbreath, attested to by Hugh Kilbreath on March 3, 1806. We know that a Nathan Coffee married Elizabeth Gilbreath, the daughter of John. Tradition states that John died in the Revolutionary War, so it is relatively safe to assume that the name was misspelled in the records.

The Gilbreath-Coffee or Gilbreath-Morrow Cemetery is located on the old Morrow Place southeast of Mt. Pleasant, Tennessee.

James (2.5) was a veteran of the War of 1812. He received bounty land for his widow in 1845 near Mt. Pleasant, Tennessee. He was buried in the Gilbreath Coffee Cemetery in Maury County, Tennessee. His wife, Elizabeth Baker Gilbreath, is also buried there. His oldest son, Andrew Jackson Gilbreath, settled in Polk County, Arkansas. He later moved to Dublin, Texas and died there in 1911. His children live near Hillsboro.

John Gilbreath (4.5) married Susan Stalcup. His oldest son moved to Tulia, Texas. Both James and John Gilbreath, brothers of Andrew, have children all over Texas.

The trip to Texas was started midsummer in 1848. It took two months to make the trip in five wagons drawn by oxen. Five families came along with the Andrew Gilbreath's (1.5) among whom were the two McIntosh boys, John and his brother Elijah. They were born in Temos, Kentucky and were stepchildren of Andrew. Some of the others were Elijah and Sarah Attaway, who were the parents of Kizzie Attaway Gilbreath, wife of Joel. There was also a man named Wright and a John Kirkpatrick, who were of no relationship to the Gilbreaths, as far as it is known, but helped with the chores and livestock, in order to come along on the trip to Texas. Andrew also brought his slaves with him.

The emigrants brought along with them all their household supplies, bedding, cows, hogs and chickens. They also had horses on which the boys rode, but the wagons were drawn by oxen. The people generally did not ride in the wagons, other than the old women and small children, but walked along side. Most of the crew were a mile or two behind the wagons, driving the stock.

The exact place for crossing the Mississippi is not known, but we suppose it was Natchez, Mississippi. They followed the Natchez Trace, as it was a direct course from Mt. Pleasant, Tennessee to Natchez, Mississippi. This route provided springs for water supply and camping places previously used by the Indians.

They crossed the Mississippi by ferry. The river was described as being almost a mile wide at the crossing. Their wagons, supplies, livestock, wives, children and slaves were loaded on the ferry. With this load, they started across. Near midstream, they struck the current, and the ferry tilted and nearly overturned. The passengers were panic stricken. In the family tales told about the trip after the arrival in Texas, this figured as the closest to major disaster on the trip.

After arriving at the opposite shore and unloading the barge, they made camp near the river in order to wash the clothes, dry out the wagons, bedding and supplies, repack, and get ready for the rest of the journey.

After all the chores were done with every wagon repacked and loaded for the journey, Andrew gathered all the people around, stood up on a stump where he was in plain sight of all, and thanked God for sparing them this far. He also asked God for His guidance through the wilderness ahead.

One of the interesting highlights of the trip supposedly happened before the river crossing. Among the livestock was a sizeable heard of hogs. They penned the animals at night by cutting saplings to make pens. One night the pen was built hurriedly and probably not as substantial as it should have been. One of the boys found a dried bear's head near the edge of the camp. He recalled a story he had heard that if a bear's head was thrown into a pen of hogs they would all break out of the pen. He laid the bear's head aside where he could find it. When everyone was safely in bed, he decided to try it out to see if it would work. When he heaved the head into the midst of the hogs, sure enough the entire bunch panicked, dashing headlong to the other side of the pen through the saplings and ran off squealing into the darkness.

The next morning the crew of boys started a hunt for the missing hogs. All that day and night they hunted, and the next evening, at the end of the day, the hogs were found thirty miles from camp on their way back home, apparently having concluded that this new country was decidedly inhospitable.

The wagon train continued westward. From Natchez they traveled the Caddo Trace To Shreveport, then to Shreveport, then to Jefferson on to the northernmost edge of Wood County. This Caddo Trace was a well worn early Indisn road, which ran in a northwesternly direction within twelve miles northeast of Jefferson on west to Greenville, touching the very north edge of Wood County. Like the Natchez Trace, it provided safe crossing of the Red River and well marked campsites near fresh springs. This road was well used by the pioneers moving west.

The first night spent in Wood County was south of Black Oak near an old French fort. Near this fort was level land for making camp. Nearby were springs with a plentiful water supply and a grove of oak trees which provided shade from the sun. The walls of this old French fort stood near which could be used for protection from wild animals and bad weather. Here they camped and explored the surrounding country for a place to live.

It was on this spot that Joel built a campfire using gunpowder from his powder horn. In his excitement about locating a spot for his new home, he forgot to put the stopper in his powder horn while lighting the fire. The powder in his horn caught on fire and exploded, blowing the strap from around his neck, but as he was nearing his destination, he would not need it.

Andrew and his wife Rachel settled near Gilbreath Springs southeast of Lindale and lived there two years. His son, James, settled there, too, and raised his family never moving away. After two years, Andrew sold out to his son, James, and moved to Wood County in 1850, leading some people to believe the whole clan settled in Wood County at that time.

Andrew and Rachel moved into his son Joel's house east of the Rock Hill Cemetery in 1850. They kept a Christian home and possessed high standards which were passed onto them from their forefathers. Texas had already been declared a state. Wood County, which had been part of four other counties at one time, had its present boundaries established.

Other than their numerous progeny scattered about the country, one of the last memorials to Andrew and his wife is the Rock Hill Cemetery. They gave the land for the cemetery but never made a deed to it, only withholding it from the sale of the estate. Years later, the county had the deed drawn up to Mr. Bird, who was a county commissioner, signed as a commissioner and not as owning the property. This cemetery consists of five acres and came to be the final resting place for Andrew, Rachel and many of their children and several generation of grandchildren. Their slaves were also buried there.

From the 1850's to 1890's, crops grew almost wild. Before the Civil War was over, cotton was only ten cents a pound. After the war, it sold for one dollar per pound. Grannie Kizzie sat in a chair and moved her basket along the row ahead of her. She possibly picked thirty pounds a day in this fashion. It took two or three weeks to pick a bale of cotton.

While the men freighted their cotton to Jefferson, the women took care of the children, tended to the livestock and wove cloth for all their clothing. Kizzie wove cotton into cloth and made, from this homespun material, all the clothes the entire family wore. As no machine was available, she cut and stitched the clothing by hand.

Wild game was plentiful in the timberland of Wood County. Vegetables and both sweet and Irish potatoes were hilled from the cold weather. Most of the families carried water from the springs or creeks for consumption and also washed their clothes in the creeks nearby. Malaria and other diseases were frequent problems due to the swarms of mosquitoes and other vermin in the summer.

Sugar cane was grown to make sugar and syrup. Wheat was grown for flour, and corn for meal. The nearest flour mill was Stinson's Mill in Kemp County. William David Gilbreath, son of Joe, had gone to the flourmill when his father-in-law, Henry Morgan, died. He did not reach home until after the funeral. The trip to the mill usually took six days going and coming.

The ash hopper was used to make lye for soap. Shortening was produced by frying down pork and straining it off. Soap was produced by using the residue of meat from the shortening. A typical bed had a corn shuck mattress on the bottom with a feather bed on top for comfort.

Times were not easy. It took much energy and effort just to feed, clothe and shelter their families, and these hardy folk worked, as the old saying goes, "from can to can't".

At the time these people settled in Wood County, it was a part of what is now three counties. Wood County was organized in 1850 by Act of Legislature. At the time of the arrival of the Gilbreaths, there were only six or eight settlers in all of Wood County. County government was organized under a large post oak tree not far from Hainesville, where two or three settlers lived at that time. There were no towns at that time except maybe Hainesville and Stout. Quitman was chosen site of the county seat in the Fall of 1850.

Bro. E.G. Sharp was an early settler united with Quitman Baptist Church in July, 1856 and was ordained to preach. He was a pioneer settler of Yantis. He married and buried most of this generation.

Quitman Post Office was established in 1851; Winnsboro in 1874; Hawkins in 1876. Most of the settlers received their mail at one or the other of these places.

In the late 1850's through 1870, after William David Gilbreath had "laid by his crop" (planted, cultivated and finished working his crop) he hitched up his oxen and started for Jefferson, Texas to bring back fall goods and groceries. After he gathered his crops, he would go again, hauling cotton to Jefferson for $5.00 per bale. The upsand downs he had with his team of oxen, Indians, mud holes, red clay hills, and swimming creeks with bridges gone out (where they existed at all) furnished Grandmother Polly Ann a lot of wonderful stories for her grandchildren.

Excerpt from "WOOD COUNTY DEMOCRAT":

"Kizzie, wife of Joel Gilbreath, who passed away since our last meeting, came here about 1850. She was a great and good woman--great because she was good. She cared for a number of small children, cooked on a fireplace with skillets, fry pan, etc., without any stove. Corded, spun and wove with her own hands, and sewed with her fingers with needle and thread and made clothes for her family." (5)

Our grandfather, William David, and some of his brothers, and quite a few of his uncles fought in the Civil War, some never returning.

(5) Joseph Attaway was a native of South Carolina. He fought in the Revolutionary War, and one of his big toes was shot off during that war. Joseph Attaway was the father of David Attaway and William Attaway. David Attaway, born either 1803 or 1813. He was the son of Joseph Attaway. David Attaway was born in Spartanburg Dist., S.C. Rebecca was his wife's name. He migrated from S.C. to Tenn. to Miss. to Hopkins Co., Tex., where he bought 640 acres of land on 6-29-1853, near Black Oak. U.S. Census of 1870 shows his age 67. David and Rebecca were the parents of 14 kids: Elisha, Emily, Keziah, Willis, Jane, James, Nicey, Leathy, Melvina, Elbert or Albert F., Martha, Mary, Edith and Charles Attaway.

The Pierce's moved to Oklahoma in the summer of 1900. They had four children at that time. They carried their property in two covered wagons drawn by mules. At this time, Oklahoma was in Indian Territory. Uncle Ben gave fifty dollars each at two chances in a raffle contest. Tickets were put in a hat and a name or names drawn out. The lucky name drawn won eighty acres of land. This was known as the land run of August 6, 1901 in which the Kiowa, Commanche and Apache reservations were opened to the land rush. Uncle Ben kept one ticket and gave the other to Aunt France. Both tickets won eighty acres of land. They then had to decide on which land to keep. This was school and railroad land. Their land was located on Beaver Creek in Oklahoma. They lived in Indian Territory seven years before Oklahoma became a state on November 17, 1907. After deciding upon the location of their land, they built an adobe house and half dugout in which they lived several years. Many of the children remember how very cold it was in the winter. They continued to own this land for many years while their children grew up, married and raised families there.

The first part of the paper discusses the importance of the study of the history of the United States. It is argued that a knowledge of the past is essential for a full understanding of the present. The author then goes on to discuss the various factors which have shaped the development of the United States, including the influence of the British, the Spanish, and the French. He also discusses the role of the American people in the creation of the new nation. The paper concludes by stating that the study of the history of the United States is a task of great importance, and that it is one which should be undertaken by all who are interested in the future of the country.
